Kramnik in action Lithuania on top

This time we shall start with ladies' competition where some dramatic changes occurred in yesterday's round. In match number one China won convincingly against France (2,5:0,5), but this was not enough to take the lead because in match number two the Baltic derby finished with a maximal victory of Lithuanian team who took the lead with still a perfect score! Russia won with the same result against Poland and joined China. Both teams have 8,5 points. Half a point behind them are Ukraine (3:0 against Mongolia) and Romania (2,5:0,5 against Italy «A»). Three more teams came closer to the top with 7,5 points: USA, Bulgaria and Israel after their victories against respectively Cuba, Bosnia&Herzegovina and Hungary.

It was a black day for Italian teams. Italy «A» lost to Romania by making just half a point. Some excuse can be a very unlucky pairing which gave them a strong opponent and two black pieces. The honour was saved by Zimina on board two where they had white. Italy «B» lost as well, this time against Norway.

The top pairings for tomorrow are: Russia-Lithuania, China-Ukraine, USA-Romania, Bulgaria-Israel and Georgia-India.

The most interesting match by men was between Russia and Germany and for two reasons. First, Kramnik finally appeared in Russian team and won rather easily and convincingly against Naiditsch and second, this match was something like a civil war since seven out of eight players were Russians! A second victory was scored by Bareev against Lutz, Morozevich couldn't escape from perpetual check against Jussupow, but Rublevsky against Graf unexpectedly lost an endgame which looked rather equal, at least at first sight.

After such a modest result the leader was joined by two teams who managed to cash 3,5 points: China and Uzbekistan winners against Slovakia and Australia, and by actual champions of Ukraina victorious against SCG (Serbia&Montenegro) with 3:1. All these teams have 10,5 points. Half a point behind them are Netherlands, 3:1 victory against Turkey and Greece, 2,5:1,5 against Poland. Seven teams follow with 9,5 points. These are: Armenia, Bulgaria, Spain, Iceland, Norway and Brazil.

As for Italian teams they scored slightly better than yesterday, but still they managed to win just one match – Italy «C» against Botswana- losing other two – Italy «B» was smashed on zero by a strong Czech team, while Italy «A» lost with a narrow margin to Albania. An interesting detail is that three Albanian players are actually living in Italy!

The top pairings for tomorrow are: China-Russia, Uzbekistan-Ukraine and Netherlands-Greece. It could easily happen that we shall see the clash of titans – Russia against Ukraine – already in round five!

Huge success on-line

If there was such a thing as a "sold out" for access to websites, the Chess Olympiad would probably have already been turning people away in droves.

On Sunday, the opening day, the pages at www.chessolympiad-torino2006.org were browsed by nearly 2 million people and yesterday contacts were way over 3 and a half million. Today, less than an hour from the start of the games, 2 million enthusiasts have already accessed the site from all over the world and at the end of the day we expect confirmation of record contacts. "Chess has benefited enormously, more than other sports from the spread of information technology, particularly the internet", says Misho Cebalo, Grand Master and member of the Organising Committee of the Turin 2006 Chess Olympiad. Wrongly, the media do not give much space to chess even though millions of players follow it. "And yet thanks to the Internet", adds Cebalo, "today it is possible to follow the great chess events such as the Olympiad live at the Turin Oval, in real time and from all corners of the earth".

Chess in India

Chess in India has taken center stage and the Indian team is seeded second in the chess Olympiad. The Team is led by Vishy Anand with Krishnan Sasikiran Pentala Harikrishna and Surya sekar Ganguly forming the top boards of the team. Chess in India has been booming with many youngsters doing well in Asian & world youth chess championship.

Many foreign coaches have been working with the talented juniors and prominent among them are Grandmaster Evgeny Vladimirov and Anand's second Ubilava Eliza-bar and Ruslan Sherbakov.

GM Vladimirov Evgeny has been instrumental in development of Harikrishna and Sasikiran. While recently Deepan Chakravarthy, Neelapotal das and Mahesh Chandran became Grandmasters. Vladimirov is a brilliant coach known for his exemplary end-game technique having a magnetic effect, spectators and the participating players being drawn towards his board at the slightest hint of an approaching end-game. The master technician makes endings appear a matter of natural ease, squeezing wins out of the equal positions. Winning a GM event of the magnitude of a Category 10 event with two rounds to spare is has enhanced his reputation. The Kazakhstan GM with a rating of 2598 has been a former trainer of the legendary Garry Kasparov.

India has many junior events and there is a weekend event happening in every major city. Many coaches are involved in training and the talented juniors spend a minimum of 4 hours preparing. There is also sponsorship available for the juniors from sports ministry as well as corporate support. There are 12 grandmasters and numerous International master. India is set to surge ahead to the pinnacle of chess with youngsters like Parimajan negi knocking the doors of grandmaster title at an tender age.

Chess in Sri Lanka

Here are 3000 registered players in srilanka and their National chess federation is in Colombo the capital of the island country. The chess fraternity has 3 fide masters and the officials of the federation are working on getting the first International master title. There is government support and a team of experienced officials are working to enhance the skills of talented juniors . Chess is in schools where the federation conducted a schools tournament among 400 schools and 200 children . It is going in good direction and they need corporate sponsors to put their players in in world map. There are 5 Major events and held every 2 months.

The National championship cycle is the most important event and is held at grassroots level it takes 3 months to complete at various level and there is selection from many divisions like novice , major National B and National finals We have junior Nationals for under 20 players in women and men boys & girls. We are planning for a foreign coach to prepare the team . Fide is contributing to the development but more is needed and in 2003 we had the CADEC seminar in Colombo.

FIDE has earlier supported chess among developing countries and with an expert foreign coach thing would take off as we have many talented juniors. The federation has organized major r events like the Asian junios , in succession in 2002 & 2003 and Asian Zonal. We have identified the top players and they need to play many tournaments and get grandmaster training. we have started to organize international events coming up in july at kandy and in December at Colombo.

Interview with Geurt Gijssen

The arbiters team is the largest here in the Olympiad hall: 116 people assure that all the chess rules are closely complied with and that the overall competition runs smoothly. In order to carry out their task in the most efficient way arbiters are organized in a precise hierarchy. Geurt Gijssen (Netherland) is the chief, with the assistance of two deputies, Franca Dapiran (Italy) and H. Elgendi (Egypt). The playing area is divided into seven sectors, each one under the supervision of a senior arbiter. The remaining 106 arbiters are almost equally divided between Italy (48) and the rest of the world (58). Chief arbiter Geurt Gijssen has kindly accepted to answer a few questions.

«Have you already been arbiter in other chess Olympiads?»

Yes, indeed this is my fourth Olympiad as chief arbiter, the others being Bled (2002), Istanbul (2000) and Elista (1998), while in Erevan (1994) I was deputy chief. But I took part to other Olympiads since 1984 with other duties.

«What is the difference between Olympiads and other chess tournaments?»

Its special atmosphere, that you find nowhere else. Only here you can find players of all levels in the same hall, from the world champion to almost a beginner. It happens also that every two years a lot of players from every corner of the world meet together and they become friends. Of course several of them are professional and play at international level, but some others, for instance from Africa or South America, have access to international competitions only in the Olympiads. No surprise that in my long experience I have seen players growing from teenager to adult. It is really a great show, that represents the best publicity for chess worldwide.

«As arbiter, have you ever experienced problems during the competitions?»

Not at all. I do not remember neither special technical problems, nor serious troubles. Rather, there may happen facts that I would rather call mistakes. Here in Turin, for instance, a few of the chess sets that were given by FIDE had an unconventional shape, and some teams refused to play with them, but the issue was readily fixed. Of course we may receive complaints, but this is normal and makes the tournament less boring... The chief arbiter should indeed act as a manager. I remember especially the Elista Olympiads, where the organizers had little experience for such a great event, and I was able to provide extensive training with very good results. Also here for the Turin Olympiads I held in march a special seminar for the italian arbiters in Chianciano Terme.

«What is your opinion about the Turin event so far?»

There are weak and strong points, of course. On the minus side I have to mention some problems with the dislocation of the sites, the village and the playing hall, that are not far, but not so close. I have to add that there have been complaints about long queues, especially at lunch before playing, but this problem is going to be solved. I have to emphasize that the Oval is the most beautiful playing hall that I have ever seen, and the lighting and the almost soundless air conditioning are outstanding. Also the way players and spectator are separated is the best I can remember. But I have been especially surprised by the number of volunteers: polite, efficient and inflexible.

1.Nf3 Nf6 2.c4 c5 3.g3 d5 4.d4 Although this move objectively doesn't promise White anything special, it is always good to put your opponent on rather unexplored paths. Bxg2?? loses to 18.Nf5!] 18.Bxc6 bxc6 19.Rac1 Bd6 20.Qh4 Ng8 Winning two pieces for a rook, but White will be also three pawns ahead! 21.Qxe7 Bxe7 22.Nxe6 Nxh6 [Or 22...fxe6 23.Bxf8 Rxf8 24.Rxc6 and black pawn would be more vulnerable on e6 than on f7.] 23.Nxf8 Bxf8 24.Rxc6 White has obtained a decisive material advantage (rook and three pawns against two pieces). The rest is just a demonstration of technique. 24...Rd8 25.Rfc1 Kg7 26.R1c2 Protecting the second rank and not allowing Black any kind of counterplay. 26...Nf5 27.e3 Restricting the knight. Next step would be to improve the king and start to attack -a- pawn and to push both pawn majorities. 27...a5 28.Ra6 Rd5 29.e4 [29.Kf1 Nd6 30.Ke2 was winning as well, but it's just a matter of taste.] 29... Rd1+ 30.Kg2 Nd4 31.Rc7 With the idea to put both rooks on the seventh rank, so Black must react. 31...Nb5 32.Rb7 Nd6 33.Rd7 There is no way to avoid a deadly pin without loosing some more material. That's why Black stopped the clock. 1-0 [M.Cebalo]

Chess and the mind

Of the speakers at the third meeting on "Chess and the mind", prof. Angelo Raffaele Meo, first Professor of Information Technology in the history of Italian universities and President of the Turin "Science Centre", attracted the lion's share of the attention. We might have expected a dry, academic paper, all uncompromising scientific exposition, but at the start of the evening Federico Peiretti had spoken of prof. Meo as a prophet of free software, so it was legitimate to expect something more sparkling.

Even so it would have been really difficult to imagine with what irony and discipline, good spirits and precision, Meo was able to literally enchant the audience which had gathered in numbers at the Congress Centre of the Unione Industriale, in his brief and at the same time exhaustive history of computers and chess-playing software.

Starting from the eighteenth century hoax, von Kempelen's automa, prof. Meo handled his argument with an assured, lucid knowledge of the chess world right down to the match between Deep Blue and sparov, effectively on the way the misconceptions stion. Everything with sparkling on the life and the great mathematician and Alan Turing, chess super-over women, were told, on flimsy data. had been D'Alessan- and expert in starting from that dedica-like Deep humans, he games born ms invert see the man the program, violating the virtual physics of the environment in which the game takes place. Thus performance often improves well beyond the expectations of the creators of the game themselves.

The third and last report, by Venetian chess master Antonio Rosino, rich in personal memories of his experience as a teacher, focused on the changes that the explosion in information technologies and telecommunications have had on the chess world. With the disappearance of adjourned games, and correspondence play made practically obsolete, the personal computer has become "our metal friend", a happy expression that we owe to GM Jury Razuvaev.

Everything has changed: how we analyse games, how we prepare for tournaments, how we obtain information in the shortest of times or even in real time, how we train by playing on the internet, randomly on the best known sites or with chosen opponents, how we use digital publishing and internet-based training. An authentic revolution with positive and negative aspects that distances chess from all other sports. Perhaps, as Antonio Rosino said in conclusion, precisely because chess is more than just a sport.
