Russian ladies without mercy

Once more we shall start with ladies' section where Lithuanians were brutally brought to reality after short moments of glory. Their match against Russia was one way street all the time and at the end not even a single half a point was put on their account. Such a result allowed Russia to take a sole lead with 11,5 points and a comfortable gap of 1,5 points ahead of Ukraine who will be their opponents in the round five. It means that yesterday we guessed well this pairing but in the wrong section. The other derby China-Ukraine was decided in the favour of latter thanks to the victory of Lahno against Wang Yu. Three teams are sharing third place with 9,5 points: China, USA and Bulgaria who defeated Romania and Israel with the same result 2:1. Behind them 5 teams with 9,0 points: Hungary, Estonia, Romania, Lithuania and Spain. The greatest jump forward was made by Estonia who surprisingly won all the games against Netherlands who should be objectively stronger according to their elo points. This confirms that sometimes bravehearts are those who decide battles and not the quality of weapons. All three points were cashed by Spain as well. Their victim was Peru. In this group victorious was still Hungary, 2,5:0,5 against France, while other two teams, Lithuania and Romania, slipped down a bit.

Both Italian teams were successful and won with the same result 2:1 against Sweden and respectively IBCA team. Italy «A» has 8 points which means that they are not far from the leading group.

Top pairings for round six will be: Ukraine-Russia, Bulgaria-USA, Hungary-China, Estonia-Romania and Lithuania-Spain.

One more new face appeared in Russian team yesterday. It was Svidler who came directly from Sofia and debuted in the team in the same way as Kramnik did two days ago – «veni,vidi,vici». Another full point was made by Grischuk and this was enough for 3:1 victory against China. Surprisingly this was not enough for a sole lead because Armenia, on the wings of their front players Aronian and Akopian, cashed all 4 points against Norway and came to 13,5 points as well. Tomorrow it will be another great match on table number one. A considerable step forward was made by Netherlands who made three points against Greece and now is on third place with 13 points. The most beautiful and fighting match in this Olympiad up to now was between Uzbekistan and Ukraine which ended in 2:2, but without a single draw! On board number one Kasimdzhanov outplayed Ivanchuk in one of the most dynamic lines of the Spanish opening, but on board number two one of the young ukrainian «killers», Volokitin, equalised quickly the score with a spectacular piece sacrifice (see the comments). Uzbeks took the lead again when on board number four Ludalchev defeated Moiseyenko, but not for a long time, since other young «killer», Karjakin, converted better endgame into a full point. With these 2 points Uzbeks are on the 4th place with 12,5 points. Half a point behind them are 4 teams with 12 points: Ukraine, Bulgaria, Spain and Sweden.

Italian fans can be satisfied with yesterday's results of their teams. «A» team won convincingly against Singapore. It was 3,5:0,5, but D'Amore probably somewhere missed the win. «B» team cashed all 4 points against Malta. Only the «C» team didn't managed to complete a very successful day for Italian chess.

Top pairings for round six are: Russia-Armenia, Uzbekistan-Netherlands, Spain-Sweden and Ukraine-Bulgaria. After a disastrous beginning, India is already on table number five playing against China.

The show goes on!

Olympiad curiosities

All previous Chess Olympiad records are being mangled here in Turin. Number of nations present, number of men's and women's teams and, consequently, number of men and women players.

Of the less young we might mention the celebrated Viktor Kortschnoj (75), here in the company of his inseparable wife Petra.

The arrival of some of the high-fliers from the Sofia tournament (Kramnik, Svidler, Kamsky, Anand) stirred the interest of the fans who are following the games live at the venue and on the internet site, which yesterday recorded a peak of 3,800,000 hits, numbers that are really exceptional for chess.

Three pigeons have been among the most assiduous spectators. They fly peacefully in and around the iron roof structure of the Oval and have so far escaped every attempt to capture them or drive them away; at least up to now they have avoided coming to rest on the boards during the games.

Meanwhile, yesterday, the fire fighters netted a baby falcon that was also loose in the building, maybe hunting its lunch in the form of the pigeons.

Today sees the start of the World Computer Championship; about thirty programs will fight it out (in the first hall, next to the Fiat Auto stand) for the title of best chess-playing software. Among the personalities present is David Levy, famous for his bet of £1250 in 1968 that no program would be able to beat him in the next ten years.

Ten years later he just scraped past the then world champion chess program, so he won the bet but lost one of the 4 games!

The Turin Olympiad is being followed all over the world and some 300 journalists are accredited: dozens and dozens of articles are coming out in every country and in every language, on every continent, every day. Chess really is a universal language!

But the internet is not to be taken lightly either: we have touched a record 3,800,000 hits but as things start to heat up, this number is destined to increase.

Curiosities on the stands in the first hall include the pieces made out of taps, that of Trenitalia, that of Fiat Auto (you can ask for a free run-out in one of the cars) and that of the Turin Chess Club, whose idea it was to organise the Chess Olympiad here in Turin. Also worth a visit are the stands of the Region, Province and Municipality to help you get to know the city, environs and the region of Piedmont as a whole.

And let's not forget the Dresden stand, advertising the city that will be hosting the Olympiad in 2008.

The fourth round saw the first official complaint: for reasons of privacy we cannot publish the names of the people involved but here are the facts. In one of the games in the women's tournament, a player alleged that her opponent was not the same as the player shown on the identity card, but somebody else with another name. The game was paused for a time but, after in depth investigation, it was confirmed that everything was in order: the player whose identity was in doubt was recognised by two arbiters from a neighbouring country.

Open tournaments

The over thousand players competing in the Olympiads are not really alone in Turin. When most of their games are finished, and only a few endings are on the main stage, a lot of chess enthusiasts sit down in the nearby hall in the same Oval venue and start fighting.

After having looked at the champion games, spectators can play themselves in contests of all kinds in the City of Turin International Chess Festival. Maybe this is not the best period of the year for holding tournaments for amateur chess players, as summer holiday time has yet to come, but the Olympiads chance was worth a bet. And the bet has indeed been successful, as numbers are showing.

For the lovers of serious tournaments is available, with nine rounds and 114 or an equivalent national range of strength take part, a club player to the 2410 tournament, Igor Naumkin for the 800 € first prize as Sergei Simonenko (Tucolin (France). Almost half above 2100, thus ensuring chance, at least in the first strengths opponents.

play an array of open Open A is the main event, players with a FIDE rating of 1402 or higher. Players of a wide range of strength take part, from the 1402 rating of the only GM in the field from Russia, who competes with a handful of IMs such as Arkady Naiditsch and Vincent Keymer. Most of the players have a rating that everybody has the chance to meet master

For less ambitious players Open B allows to meet opponents with a rating up to 2100 Elo and has 68 participants.

Open C (up to 1800 Elo) and D (up to 1500 Elo) are dedicated to club players and if locals clearly are the majority of the 170 participants, even here players from other countries can also be found.

For those who are not willing to spend hours on a single game on the chessboard, or simply cannot afford to take a holiday week, Active Chess (30 minutes thinking time) and Blitz (10 minutes) tournaments are the perfect choice for one or two evenings of real fun.

21...Qe5+? [After this error Black is lost. The only move to stay in the game was 21...Kd8 22.0-0 Nxf5 where White certainly has enough compensation for a pawn but the final outcome would have been still quite unclear.] 22.Kf1 Kd8 [More resistant was 22...Nxf5 but after 23.Re1 Qd4 24.Bb4+ Nd6 25.Re2 with c2-c3 coming in the next move black queen will not be able anymore to protect f7.] 23.f6 Nf5 [Even worse is 23...Nf3 24.Bxf3 Qxa1+ 25.Kg2 Qxa3 26.Qxg7] 24.Re1 Qd4 25.Bb4 1-0. A really nice demonstration of combinative insight by Volokytin!

Arbiters in Turin

In every sport, and chess is no exception, arbiters play a fundamental role. They must assure that every player comply with the rules and that regulations are applied without discriminations. In international and national competitions the ratio arbiters/players is about 1 to 70/80, but here at the Olympiads it is completely different: 116 arbiters for 450 chessboards! Here is the complete list on the arbiters who work in the paying arena, but others operate in a less visible way, for instance in the Pairing Committee or in the Appell Commission.
